FESTIVAL OF SHARING OHIO

Lifting each other up in difficult times.

You know what it's like to live through a crisis. It's the kind of thing that has you glued to your computer, phone or t.v. as you wait for guidance on what you should do.

In the past year, families in Ohio have experienced that all too often. Flooding, tornadoes, a mass shooting, a global pandemic and racial injustice are just a few traumas we've recently felt.

But we've also felt human kindness and a renewed gratefulness for one another. We're lifting each other up in our worst times. Your support of the Festival of Sharing does exactly that.

After last year's tornadoes, the Festival's kits meant recovery for families in Dayton. They meant struggling children in Franklinton (Columbus) could get the school supplies they needed for success. They meant neighbors at Cherry Street Mission (Toledo) and the Mid-Ohio Food Bank (Columbus) could stay clean and healthy during COVID-19's peak.

It's been a hard year, but with your help, we can get through it together. Will you reach out a helping hand by assembling kits for the upcoming Festival? Your gifts will support neighbors here in Ohio and around the world.

"We look at the [Clean Up Buckets] as our faithfulness. It's our faith in action, that we pack these buckets and we send them off. We don't know who they are going to, but we know they are going to someone. And that's just an incredible way that the Spirit prompts us to act. And what I think is great about the buckets is that they are ready to go long before a disaster hits. So when that disaster hits we have an immediate response."

- REV. TERRY KUKUK
